Not long since I visited a home where comforts abounded and in every room was the touch of an elegant taste. The table was superbly set with things rare and beautiful. The meal was well cooked and beautiful. The meal was well cooked and well served. In this house, so far as the eye could see, was everything that heart could wish, and all the more pleasing because there was no estentation. The intelligence of the family was above the ordinary. I spent a day and a half—and was glad to get away.

Now I must explain this seeming para-

Now I must explain this seeming paradox. Husband and wife and young people were determined that from the time I entered until I left the house I should want for nothing; and, leaving, they insisted upon loading me with all sorts of things to contribute to the comfort of the journey. Would I have this, and wouldn't I have that; and "no thank you" was not taken as conclusive. These attentions, meant to be polite and springing from the warmest hearts, were anything but comforting; for it was impossible to close in with every overture. Truth to tell at the risk of seeming ungracious, the attentions were wearying. This was the one flaw in that otherwise charming household.

How different another house, which I have in mind. Not quite so elegant, butther visitor has just enough attention and no more. The hostess says, "Our meals are at such and such hours, and we hope to see you at each of them, but if you are not, here we shall not wait. Here is your room—use it as your own." The fost says, "There are the cigars—help yourself when you feel like it. The books are at your service. Go and come as you please," and by the kindly twinkle in his eye you see that he is-not going to please and do for increased out of countenance to remain a week when you have given assurance that you have given search that most of us attraction reaches me that the whole and discriminating hospitality. A friend of the Governor gives me an explanation of his failure to pay his campaign assessment to the committee. Mr. Wilson preferred to spend his own money in his own way! I suppose this will be satisfactory to the party and particularly to Chairman Leonard. Has Any body Told You

A Story of Grant and Lincoln. Herald.

The Grafton Eagle and State Journal charge C. B. Hart, editor of the INTELLICENCER, with being a Democrat. Our readers will probably remember that on one occasion during the late war when President Lincoln was informed Grant was a drunkard, his reply was that he would be glad to know where Grant got his whisky, as he wanted some of the same kind for his other generals.

"What do you want with her?"
"Marry her."

"What for?"
"For better or worse." "I say?"
"What does the girl say?"
"She says she will be my wife."
"Ugh! You haven't got a cent in the world, have you?"
"Yes, sir. She gave assent, and if you will do the same, that will make two, and we can buy a postage stamp and write to you for the balance of our salary."
It was a wretched attempt, but he got the girl.

Reprehensible Carelesaness.

An Irishman caught a bee after it had stung him and examining it carefully, he said: "Ye dirthy little blaggart! Yes bin altin round till yes worn the sate out of yer breeches, an bedad Olve found yer knoife schicken through the hole in yer hip-pocket, ye little baythen!"

book, about which so much has been said book, about which so much has been said, is the work of General Adam Badeau. General Grant, I have no doubt, has furnished all of the material and all of the ideas in the memoirs as they have been prepared, but Badeau has done the work of composition. The most that General Grant has done upon this book has been to prepare the rough notes and memorands for its various chapters. It is important to understand General Grant has done upon this book has been to prepare the rough notes and memorands for its various chapters. notes and memoranda for its various chap-ters. It is important to understand Gen-eral Grant as he is and not to have his character hidden by 'foolish misrepresen-tation. He is one of the greatest soldiers of his time. He is one of the overshad-owing figures of our history. He has great decision. He hates and he likes in a strong way. He is not a man who could chain himself down to a deak to write. He has been essentially a man of action all his life. He is so great that he can well afford to have the exact truth told about him.

The Tramp's Error.

Detroit Free Press.

A Tramp who called at a Farm House to ask for a cold Bite was almost Paralyzed at being Welcomed with Smiles and Kind Words and having a fine Repast laid out for him. In Explanation the Woman said that he Reminded her of her Long-Lost Commin.

At the next house the Tramp at one Announced that he was the Woman's Long-Lost Brother, but in place of Senties and Mince Pie the Woman seized the Broom-stick and went for him, saying: "Slide out, you Villain! They were al Girls in Our Family!"

How He Wen Her.

Morskent Trueter.

A young editor, bright, poor and punsterious, had won the affections of a rich man's caughter, and they had fixed a day for him to call on the father, and on that day he was promptly in the old gentleman's colice.

"Good morning, sir," he said, confident, but ready to run, "Thave called on you on a matter of—"

"We don't want any advertising today," interrupted the old gentleman, looking up over his glasses."
